CorelDRAW Graphics Suite 2018 v20.0.0.633 (x86) + Crack 10.1.Protonation of the aromatic rings in methanol and ethanol. The most basic form of methanol and ethanol is formed at high concentration in aqueous solutions where H₂O⁻ is the most mobile water. Because this is the most electronegative form of the proton, the aromatic rings in the molecules of these alcohols are expected to be doubly negatively charged. By X-ray diffraction, we show here that indeed two extra protons are attached to the benzenic rings and that the two negative charges are delocalized over a relatively long stretch of the chain. These protons are formed on a fast rate, and the average residence time of the molecules in the gas phase prior to entering the condensed phase of the solution is in the order of 50 microseconds. The location of these protons on the aromatic rings is not consistent with that of the hydroxyl group.
